This tutorial will teach you how to use Photoshop's various functions to edit and perfect your photographs. You'll learn how to set up and use a blank canvas, how to import and export images, and how to work with layers, paths, adjustment layers, gradients, selections, and masks. We will also take a look at post-processing effects to get the most out of your images before sending them to clients. Photoshop has a right-click menu that allows you to apply changes easily. Click on the menu icon, then click on "Edit" on the menu that appears. You can apply image effects after your photo has been edited by selecting the "Effects" command in the Edit menu. This menu allows you to adjust filters, saturation, sharpen, and hue to your images. To use the color picker, click on the pop-up menu to the right of the color slider on the toolbar. You can then adjust the color to make changes to the photo by clicking on the slider of any color in the image. This works great for adjusting highlights and shadows. You can also use this feature to adjust color in a range, such as from a photo of green plants to a bright orange to adjust for the lighting in your subject. Click anywhere in the photo to bring up the context menu. Click on "Undo" to go back in time and create a customized image. You can also paste images to the image, duplicate the image, and crop the image. Click on the image to bring up the crop tool, which allows you to make specific alterations to an image. Click on the "Rectangular" crop tool in the toolbar, and drag a selection around the subject of the image to crop the image. Click on "Image" to exit the crop tool. Q: PHP - how to upload a file to a location on my server I want to upload a file from a client to my server. The server is on my network (192.168.1.103) and the user's machine is on a public network (192.168.100.50). They need to be able to connect to the server and allow access to the file(s). Is it possible for them to upload a file to that location if they are not on the same network? A: Of course yes! :-) With PHP you can use cURL. For example: `$ch = curl_init(""); curl_setopt($ch, CURLOPT_RETURNTRANSFER, true); curl_setopt($ch, CURLOPT_POST, true); curl_setopt($ch, CURLOPT_POSTFIELDS, "post-data-here"); $result = curl_exec($ch);` If you are on a machine on the public network, you can try to setup an SSH tunnel with the server. Enhanced extracellular matrix-mediated adhesion of four cell lines on quartz, chromium, and titanium compared with polystyrene and polydimethylsiloxane. The adhesion strength of many cell lines to extracellular matrix (ECM) proteins is known to vary between different culture substrates. The differences in adhesion strength between cell lines on polystyrene (PS) and ECM proteins are generally attributed to differences in the integrin alpha-chain (i.e., alpha3, alpha5, alpha6, alpha8, alpha9, alphaV, beta1, and beta4 integrin subunits) expression on these substrates, whereas it is not clear whether the cell adhesion on non-ECM substrates (e.g., polydimethylsiloxane [PDMS]) is also mediated by integrins. This study tested the hypothesis that there are differences in the adhesion strength of cell lines to PS and ECM proteins because of their integrin expression. We prepared substrates (e.g., PS, quartz, chromium, and titanium) that differed in their chemistry, topography, and roughness. Human epithelial cell lines (e.g., MRC5, A549, H1299, XTC-2, MDA231, and A375) and human mesenchymal cell lines (e.g., MRC-5, J774, JEG-3, and Saos-2) were tested on all four substrates. We determined the intrinsic surface energy, wetting angle, polar and nonpolar contact angle, and surface roughness of the substrates using the measurements of standard contact angle analysis, Attenuated Reflectance Fourier-Transform Infrared Spectroscopy, contact angle goniometry, and atomic force microscopy, respectively. We developed a measurement of cell-ECM adhesion strength using a micropipet adhesion technique. The results showed that the adhesion strength of many cell lines to the ECM proteins (e.g., collagen I) was greater on quartz and titanium than on PS and PDMS. The adhesion strengths of the cell lines were similar on PS and PDMS for the ECM proteins tested (e.g., fibronectin and collagen I). The cell lines adhered on the ECM proteins and PS more strongly on quartz, titanium, and chromium than on PDMS. Adhesion of cells to the ECM proteins was greater than adhesion

Some people seem to believe that the Wright brothers didn't start flying. They even have a reference to this on Wikipedia. The OP argues that the Wright brothers did not invent the first controlled, powered and sustained airplane flight. I disagree, and here is the reason why. I believe that the Wright
